Spokane Intercollegiate Research and Technology Institute

One Step Closer To Reality With Go-ahead From Legislature

Significant strides have been made in recent months toward the establishment of a higher education park in downtown Spokane, including the go-ahead from the state legislature for the Spokane Intercollegiate Research and Technology Institute, the first phase of the project.

The Institute will serve as a focal point for education, research and scientific investigation in the Inland Northwest, which is integral to the region's economic development. It will also provide an atmosphere that fosters interaction of academic and non-academic scientists, who will serve as a source for the area's high technology industries.

SIRTI will provide an economic boost to the region by providing research facilities, and the opportunity for networking of information and technical systems. Research tied to product development will also be an important component of SIRTI.

The Institute, which is tentatively scheduled for construction in 1990, will be located just off Trent Avenue, east of Division Street, a central location for the region's first cooperative venture among the area's colleges and universities. The 10-acre site is directly across the Spokane River from Gonzaga University, which is linked to the site by a bridge.

Eastern Washington University has been at the forefront in developing the project, which will include facilities for Washington State University, EWU and SIRTI.

"We are looking forward to participating in the full spectrum of services provided at the Institute," said EWU President Alexander F. Schilt.

A model of the proposed Higher Education Park

Through SIRTI, Eastern will offer five degrees including the master's degree in computer science and the bachelor's degree in computer information systems. Undergraduate programs in computer engineering technology and mechanical engineering technology will also be offered by Eastern through SIRTI.

SIRTI represents the most striking example of cooperation to date among the region's colleges and universities. All higher education institutions in the region - EWU, WSU, Gonzaga University, the Community Colleges of Spokane and Whitworth - are involved in the project.

It has also received support from the private sector. Momentum '88, a local economic development effort, has been one of the project's biggest boosters, a group that has provided significant financial backing.

The Institute has been given a stamp of approval by the Higher Education Coordinating Board, and received the important go-ahead from the state legislature. Last spring, the legislature appropriated $800,000 to secure land for SIRTI.

Spokane architects have proposed a site development plan that has been approved by all governing bodies of the participating institutions.

"Eastern is enthusiastic about serving the educational needs of Spokane," Dr. Schilt said. "We have been given a great deal of responsibility and I believe very firmly that we are prepared to move ahead in the spirit of cooperation and service."

EWU Alumni Association elects new officers

The new president of the EWU Alumni Association sees that group entering into a new era.

Jan Plester, a 1971 graduate, said she sees the organization moving ahead with some exciting projects.

"We have everything we need," said Plester. "We have an administration that supports our efforts and understands our organization; a vital student body willing to work with us on cooperative service projects; a newly committed board of directors who have established achievable goals; and a revitalized University Advancement team to help us reach our constituency. I am really excited about our prospects and possibilities".

Plester has a long record of support and involvement with EWU. She earned her degree in education, and was secretary to the university president from 1972 to 1980.

"Eastern is a very special school," Plester said. "We provide a majority of the adult and traditional age education for residents of Spokane County."

She added, "Most of our alumni still live and work in Washington state. That means we have the opportunity to provide meaningful services and activities. We will be inviting comments and suggestions from all our alumni about programs and services that will enhance their personal and professional goals."

The newly-elected officers and board members for the Eastern Washington University Alumni Association are:

Jan Plester, President
Karen Raver, President Elect
Jeff Skeesick, Vice President
Shanon Bowen Lynch, Secretary
Diane Showalter, Director
Sally Cole, Director
Jackie Johnson, Director
Irene Clise, Director

Isabelle Green Named EWU Alumni Relations Coordinator

Isabelle Green is the new coordinator of alumni relations at Eastern Washington University.

Green, who was previously business specialist for the Spokane Area Economic Development Council, assumed her new position Oct. 10.

"We are so pleased Isabelle has accepted this position," said Jane A. Johnson, EWU vice president for advancement. "She comes with many new and bright ideas and will be a real asset in working with both alumni and the university."

Green has many affiliations with EWU. She holds a B.S. with high honors in general studies from EWU and will complete a master's in college instruction at EWU in 1989.

She has been internship developer and instructor for the EWU communications department and was director of alumni relations, 1977-81.

Green said that as alumni relations coordinator she is working to establish an ongoing communications process between alumni and the university, discover from the alumni how the university can meet their needs, and let alumni know what they can do for the university.

"I am excited about the opportunity to work with the advancement team being built at Eastern Washington University," Green said. "With such a large percentage of EWU alumni located in Spokane County and, of course, other locations, there is a tremendous opportunity for alumni development."

Green has served on the national alumni advisory board for the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and was a member of the Society for Marketing Professional Services.

Come Along On a Cruise To The Virgin Islands

A luxurious cruise through the Virgin Islands this March is being offered to EWU alumni, faculty, staff and friends.

The 8-day/7-night voyage aboard the 100-passenger Newport Clipper is being made available to people from the Big Sky Conference and includes a hefty air fare reduction to point of embarkation, said Isabelle Green, EWU alumni relations coordinator.

Normal round-trip air fare from Seattle to St. Thomas is about $900, but is only $199 for those taking the cruise. Rates for staterooms aboard the Newport Clipper range from $1,498 per person to $2,698.

The cruise begins March 19 and includes stops at St. Thomas, St. John, St. Croix, Tortola, Norman Island and Virgin Gorda. From snorkeling in secluded coves to shopping in duty-free boutiques and from long walks along the beaches that inspired Robert Lewis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" to exploring three-centuries-old Dutch stone architecture, this Virgin Islands cruise would be a lovely way to end the winter, Green said.

For information about the Newport Clipper cruise to the Virgin Islands, call Isabelle Green at 458-6495.

Foundation Announces Florence and Earle K. Stewart Endowment

The Eastern Washington University Foundation has announced the establishment of the Florence and Earle K. Stewart Endowment Fund, made possible through a $50,000 donation from Earle K. Stewart, a former Eastern Washington University professor.

The fund is designed to stimulate intellectual growth among EWU students by providing support for development of personal libraries and encouraging cultural enrichment by providing tickets for events such as ballet and symphony performances.

"It is one of the most generous donations we have received," said Jane A. Johnson, vice president for university advancement. "We are thrilled that Mr. Stewart wants to share the great gift of reading and cultural enrichment with the students of Eastern Washington University."

Stewart, who retired in 1976, taught sociology, anthropology and social work at EWU for nearly 20 years. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Willamette University, and completed his doctoral work at the University of California - Berkeley.

While at Eastern, Stewart served on a variety of committees including chair of the Academic Senate and the Academic Appeals committee. He was twice president of the faculty.

His wife, Florence, was instrumental in supporting his pursuit of higher education. Mrs. Stewart also graduated from Willamette University, with a degree in political science. She accompanied her husband during his assignments in the U.S. Army during World War II and the Korean conflict. She died in 1985.

The focus of the Stewart Endowment Fund will allow students who demonstrate a special interest in their fields of learning to receive support for cultural enrichment and building personal libraries.

Gifts from the fund will not be used to purchase textbooks, but to build personal libraries that reflect a students' particular interest, libraries that will last a lifetime, Johnson said.

SON OF HEAVEN IMPERIAL ARTS OF CHINA

Alumni Association Sponsors 'Son Of Heaven' Viewing

Eastern Washington University's Alumni Association sponsored an alumni reception and VIP tour of the internationally acclaimed "Son of Heaven: Imperial Arts of China Exhibit" on Friday, Dec. 9, at the Seattle Center Flag Plaza Pavilion in Seattle.

More than 100 alumni viewed the exhibit, which included 225 of China's finest art treasures representing 26 centuries of Chinese history. Most of the objects -- 92 percent -- have never been seen in the United States; 80 percent have never left China.

The program began with a wine and cheese reception. A preview of the exhibit was provided by several EWU professors who discussed their recent China visits.

Additional alumni events are planned for the future. For further information, contact the Alumni Office, (509) 458-6237.

EWU Alum Andy Greathouse Touched Many Hearts

EWU alumnus Andy Greathouse died of leukemia on Nov. 14 at Swedish Hospital in Seattle. He was 24.

A longtime resident of Cheney, Andy graduated from EWU in 1986 with a degree in education. He returned to the university to work as a graduate student, a partime instructor and as the assistant women's basketball coach.

"He was a winner in life. He was young, but he touched a lot of people," said Maxine Davis, a member of the Andy Greathouse fund-raising committee.

Andy's fight against the disease sparked a fund-raising effort that spread throughout the campus community.

More than $13,000 has been raised to help cover medical costs. Fund-raising efforts will continue to defray those costs, and also to establish a memorial scholarship.

To donate to the Andy Greathouse Scholarship Fund, please write to the EWU Foundation, Mail Stop 16.

EWU Foundation Has Record Year...

The Eastern Washington University Foundation had its best year yet, raising more than $72,000 for the scholarship fund alone. That's a $12,000 increase from last year.

Through the generosity of alumni, friends, staff and faculty, the foundation assets have grown to $2.5 million, compared to $238,000 just five years ago.

Last year, faculty and staff donations increased 70 percent, Phonathon pledges were up 69 percent and the first annual fund-raising campaign generated $170,000, exceeding its goal by 60 percent.

Work has started on several fund-raising projects for this year. Money raised benefits faculty and staff research and development, as well as the student scholarship fund.

Annual Fund Drive...

Organizers of the 1988 EWU Foundation Achievement Fund Drive have set a goal of $150,000. Approximately 50 volunteers have joined co-chairs Roy Koege and Sally Brucker in making the fund drive a success.

The annual campaign began with a breakfast at the Spokane Sheraton. Volunteers from throughout the community demonstrated their enthusiasm for the project at the gathering.

Funds raised through the annual campaign will be used primarily for scholarships, faculty and staff development and research, as well as instructional material and equipment for faculty and staff, and special projects.

In conjunction with the fund drive, a dinner-dance was held to benefit faculty and staff research and development. More than 100 people attended making the first "Dinner at Eight," a entertaining gala held at Cavanaugh's Inn at the Park in Spokane.

The Achievement Fund Drive is designed to solicit support from the Spokane and Cheney business communities. Joining the foundation in fundraising efforts this year were the School of Health Sciences and School of Business.

The Fund Drive continues until January.

Phonathon Notes...

Eastern alumni will have the opportunity to visit with members of the campus community during the third annual Phonathon. They'll be calling during February and March, 1989.

Last year, more than 2,500 alums participated in contributing $50,000 to the foundation's scholarship and faculty/staff development and research funds.

This year's Phonathon will reach approximately 8,000 alumni across the United States. Faculty and staff volunteers will join students in calling.

New Board President...

Jack Dean has been elected to serve as the chairman of the EWU Foundation Board. He has been active in foundation projects for a number of years.

Dean is an attorney in the firm of Dean, Smith and Hemingway in Spokane. He just completed a term as president of the Washington State Bar Association.

The Killin scholarships are supported by contributions from EWU faculty and staff. If recipients maintain a 3.5 average or better and continue as full-time students, they may renew the scholarships for three additional years - bringing to $10,800 or more the amount they can receive.

There are 11 continuing Killin scholars now attending EWU.

The Killin recipients as well as other EWU students who are receiving scholarships for the 1988-89 academic year were honored at a scholarship reception October 21 at the home of EWU president Dr. Alexander F. Schilt.

The reception brought together not only the students but the scholarship donors as well.

"We had over 150 in attendance," said Jane Kavanagh, EWU Foundation director of annual giving. "It was a good feeling for the donors to meet the students who are receiving their scholarships, and it was a nice way to honor the students."

In addition to the Killin awards, presidential scholarships for freshmen and transfers and trustees scholarships for junior and senior students are being awarded to 55 students this year. These scholarships, which are $1,600 each, amount to $88,000.

EWU also has 50 university scholars and 6 honors scholars, which are state-funded undergraduate assistantships for academically talented students in the EWU honors program. These awards will total in excess of $73,000 this academic year.

Diane Shaw, EWU scholarship administrator, said that applications for 1989-90 academic scholarships were sent out to area high schools this fall.

"Eastern & Our Memories"

The theme for Homecoming '88 "Eastern and Our Memories," was joyfully celebrated by over 8,000 alumni, students, faculty, staff and friends of EWU during Homecoming Week, October 8-15.

The kick-off event was the annual homecoming parade featuring entries from student groups, the EWU alumni and foundation, local high school bands and the homecoming candidates.

Homecoming groups gathered all week to enjoy special entertainment and meet old friends. Events in the Pence Union Building on the Cheney campus included the Homecoming Queen Pageant, a fashion show, several musical groups, pie-eating contests and a dunk tank. The bonfire and pep rally held Friday evening and the annual Homecoming Brunch at Tawanka on Saturday morning culminated the week's on-campus activities.

The EWU Alumni Association also presented their Casino Night celebration Friday evening at the PUB, hosting alumni, faculty, staff and students for an evening of game playing fun and action.

Spokane activities included socials at the Europa Pizzeria every day during Homecoming Week and a pre-game rally and barbeque at the Spokane Higher Education Center on Friday, October 14.

Homecoming Day, October 15, started with the champagne brunch at Tawanka and moved into Albi Stadium for the pre-game tailgate party. Over 6,000 fans watched the football game between the University of Idaho and the Eastern Eagles (UI 33, EWU 22). During halftime the crowd cheered the selection of homecoming queen, Sharon Welch from Renton, WA, representing Pearce Hall. EWU President Alex Schilt also presented royalty bouquets to the three homecoming princesses, Ann Frederickson, Lindie Marshall and Tracy Trotter.

Dancing began at 9:00 p.m. at the Sheraton Hotel for the final celebration of the week, the homecoming dance. Hundreds of students and alumni will remember Homecoming '88 as a very special memory.

The EWU Alumni Association extends special thanks to Chet's Flowers of Cheney for the lovely royalty bouquets they provided for the homecoming queen and princesses and to Kellys' Movie Style Popcorn, who donated their delicious snack for the pleasure of patrons at the EWU Alumni Association Casino Night party. We hope our alums will patronize the many local businesses that contribute to EWU activities during the year.

Mielli's Marksmanship Awards Don't End With Olympic Gold

Launi Meili, a former Eastern Washington University student, did her former coach and one-time alma mater proud at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

The Cheney resident and expert marksman set an Olympic and women's world air rifle record for 40 shots standing. Out of a possible score of 400, she scored 395.

Meili, who was also a runner-up to Bulgaria's Vassela Letcheva in the air rifle competition at the 1987 World Cup and a second-place finisher in the U.S. trials, perfected her craft with the help of rifle instructor Bill Havercroft of Spokane.

Havercroft works as a maintenance mechanic lead in the EWU physical plant, but his sideline career for the past 20 years has been teaching marksmanship. Meili joined his junior rifle club as a young girl. A few years later, while she was a student at EWU, she went to him for help with her shooting.

"I've known the family for 15 years," Havercroft says, "and I consider Launi a real good friend. I worked with her during her entire collegiate career. I'm very proud of her accomplishments."

Meili's parents, Hal and Mary Kay Meili, traveled to Seoul to watch their daughter compete. The family, which includes her 20-year-old sister, Heidi, and her 12-year-old brother, Lance, has been solidly behind her in realizing her ambitions. When she first became interested in shooting, they never dreamed it would go as far as it has.

"No, never," says Mary Kay. "And to be over at the Olympics still seems like a dream."

After leaving the Olympics, Meili was invited to a reception at the White House with President Reagan, where she received an Olympic watch. She also traveled to Munich as one of eight top competitors in the German World Cup, where she earned a gold medal in the air rifle competition and a bronze medal in the three position 22 rifle.

Wanda Jewell, another EWU alumna, was also among the competitors.

"It's pretty remarkable that out of eight top shooters in the world, two of them are from EWU," says Mary Kay. "And both Launi and Wanda got their start in the ROTC at Eastern."

Launi, who just turned 25, completed four years of college at EWU, but never received her degree in dietetics. That's one of her main goals, her mother says.

At the present, Meili is still on the U.S. team and is residing at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Fort Collins, Col. Her long range plans, however, are on hold for the time being.

"We're just taking one day at a time," says Mary Kay. "It's kind of a wait and see what happens situation. And that's what we're doing."

Grant Thomas Selected International Educator of the Year

Dr. Grant Thomas, emeritus professor of marketing, has been selected International Educator of the Year by the Inland Northwest World Trade Council.

Thomas brought an international component to business education at EWU in the mid-80s by broadening the curriculum to include information on exporting, licensing, joint ventures and other principles needed to gain entry into the international market.

He taught international economics in Mexico in 1975 while on sabbatical from EWU and also participated in a trade mission to Seoul, South Korea, a few years ago to help promote international business for the Inland Northwest.

"Dr. Grant Thomas was selected International Educator of the Year in recognition of his efforts to make international trade and marketing more understandable to students and the general public," said Rob Huneke, a past president of the Inland Northwest World Trade Council and chairman of the organization's awards committee. "For his 38 years of teaching and his most significant contributions, we feel it is very appropriate that he receives this award."

Thomas, who retired in June - but who still teaches a seminar in international marketing at EWU - has been a member of the Inland Northwest World Trade Council for more than a dozen years.

He came to EWU in 1964 as acting chairman of the business administration department and served as the university's first dean of the school of business. He held that position until leaving for a year of teaching in Mexico, and has been teaching at EWU ever since his return. He was chairman of the graduate affairs council this past year.

Thomas holds a B.A. in marketing and an M.A. in economics from the University of Utah, and a Ph.D. in marketing from the University of Oregon.

Joe Jackson Named BOT Chair

Former Pasco Mayor Joe Jackson has been named chairman of the Eastern Washington University Board of Trustees. Jackson will serve the traditional one-year term as chair until September, 1989.

"One goal I have is to see EWU become the foremost regional, co-located university in Washington in pursuit of excellence in higher education," said Jackson.

Jackson has been a member of the board since 1985. He received his bachelor's degree from EWU in 1984, through courses taught in the Tri-Cities. He works for the Westinghouse - Hanford Company in the Tri-Cities as a manager within the engineering department.

Jackson said his priorities include providing the best service to "our most precious resource - students." He also intends to see the issue of faculty salaries addressed and will encourage the continued positive interaction between various campus constituents.

Seattle banker Jim Kirschbaum was selected to serve as vice chair.

Important Research Project

More injuries occur among farm-workers than the seemingly more dangerous professions of mining and construction work. More than 1,600 adults are killed each year in farming accidents, and more than 160,000 are disabled, according to the National Safety Council.

But experts say the National Safety Council data underestimates the rate of injuries among farmers. That's one reason the University of Iowa's Institute for Agricultural Medicine and Occupational Health decided to undertake a nationwide survey of the problem.

Eastern Washington University was selected by the institute to participate in the country's first comprehensive study of farming injuries along with Columbia University and Clemson University. The universities were selected because of their location among a broad cross section of farming regions.

"It's a tremendous honor to participate in such a significant project," said Dr. Pamela Elkind, professor of sociology, who is directing the survey of Washington farmers, and the analyses of the data collected for the national study. Dr. Elkind's area of expertise is environmental and medical sociology.

The study will be completed in early 1989.

International Developments

Cheney is becoming quite an international city, with more than 400 students from 40 countries attending Eastern Washington University this fall. The university has the third largest foreign exchange student body in the state behind the University of Washington and Washington State University.

The International Students Program at Eastern encourages the residents of the Inland Empire to share experiences with foreign students in a variety of ways, including inviting students to speak at schools throughout the region.

One of the most significant developments in the past year is the news that EWU will host 150 Japanese students from Asia University this spring. The business students will be studying English, American history, and physical education during their five-month stay.

Students will also visit businesses in Spokane during a special week of classes on American business. The program will have a positive cultural and economic impact on the area by enabling residents of the Inland Northwest to gain a better understanding of a Pacific Rim trading partner, said Edmund Yarwood, an EWU professor involved in establishing the program.
